duties when he thought proper? Shame upon the men

their interests. Show the present supporters of Mr.
Atkinson that you have manhood enough not to be esjoid
by any dap-trap they can bring against Mr. MacPHERSON, who has time, and will devote his energies

The cost of carriage is lessened to the smallest limit ever yet obtained.

And a rapid, thoroughly constitutional cure is effected by a single application, not only without danger to the health of the sheep, or to the colour, quality, or condition of the wool, but with extraordinary advantage to both.

This compound solution atimulates the growth of the wool, and causes an elastic softness and fulness to accompany the greatest possible purity of colour. It destroys all the paraettes which infest sheep; and, independent of its magical control over soab, is highly approved as a wool-cleaning preparation.

Mr. Allen is now in Sydney, and is prepared to disinfect and restore runs, however discassed, to complete healthful-niers, and to free them from both footrot and scab, by con-tract, on terms which will comprehend a guarantee of complete success.

"Dear Sir,—Mr. Allen arrivad on Thursday; upon aramining the sheep we found them perfectly clean from one dippling. We went through them again earefully, and examined them with the glass, but failed to find the least indication of scab, the skin being soft, with a clear healthy appearance; the wool being clear and free, and the undergrowth since dipping even and uniform in its growth—the new growth well defined.

"I he change in the sheep during the last ten days is very remarkable; they have cessed to scratch and bite.

"Rone of them have died in the dipping, which is the more remarkable as it came on to rain very heavily immediately after. I have no heattation in saying they are perfectly clean.

The undereigned are in receipt of shipments direct from Peru. This guano has been extensively used in Furope, Mauritins, and elsewhere, with great success. The large amount of phosphates contained makes it very applicable to poor or exhausted lands. Its poculiar property is to produce a greater weight of grain and roots instead of the superabundant growth of foliage and straw produced by the more exciting or stimulating guanos. It is held in such high estimation at Mauritius that 10,000 tons were used there for the sugar crop of 1850-61.

conduct of the first Parliament of Queensland, is seally very severe, emanating as it does from Mr. Justice Lutwyche. That learned gentleman has bad certain be all diputes with the Parliament of Queensland which have been referred to the Attorney-General and the Solicitor-General of Great Britain. The Crown Law Officers of the mother country have pronounced on the mere legal points sgainst Mr. Justice Lutwyche is a more competent authority than Atherton or Palmer; but unfortunately the opinions of those gentlemen upon a legal question carry a considerable weight with colonial Governments; although such Governments are not so democratic as his Honor Mr. Justice Lutwyche daires them to be. The first Parliament of Queessland can, however, well afford to abide by the censures of Mr. Justice Lutwyche. The leading portion of the Press of Great Britsin, and also of the Press of the Australian colonies, dissents from the verdict passed by his Honor. He is, we be lieve, an old pressman; and if the verdict of the English Press, as far as its members concern themselves with Queensland [matters at all, is worth anything, his Honor must admit that our young Colonial Secretary has no occasion to complain of the comments of the Press. Mr. Herbert is no great genius. Mr. Herbert is, comparatively speaking, very young man who came to the colony to fulfil a certain duty which he has well fulfilled. If he were ejected from the Parliament tomorrow, and were to return to Great Britain, a jubilate would be raised over his earlie ye certain pret-nded politicians without a tithe of his brains, whilst the intelligent portion of the community would regret his departure. If Mr. Lutwyche were to resign tomorrow, many possibly might regret his departure. If Mr. Lutwyche were to resign tomorrow, many possibly might regret his departure.

THE LATE COURT-MARTIAL.

THE LATE COURT-MARTIAL.

To the Editor of the Heraid.

Sin,—I have read with unfelyined astonishment, in your paper of this morning, a letter signed by Colonel Hamilton. Astonishment produced not so much by the act of Colonel Hamilton in publishing, whilet the case is still sub-judice, letters and questions rejected by the Court, and which were therefore not in avidence, as by your having permitted such publication under the circumstances.

Buppose a criminal were on his trial at Darlinghurst, and that the Attorney-General, conceiving that the Judge trying the case had improperly refused to admit certain questions and certain proposed avidence, if he were so far to forget his position as to request you to publish the rejected matter in the columns of your journal before the jury had arrived at its werdict,—wend you comply with such a request? I think not. But it appears to me that you have incautionally adopted that caurse in the present instance. I notice that Colonel Hamilton puts his request, that you abould consent to such publication, upon the ground that it formed part of his reply, but which the Court did not think it necessary to attach. This appears to me, and will to you when you have considered the matter, to be a misstatement. If you had refurred to the last column of your voluminous report of the proceedings of the trial, you could not fall to have observed that this matter was positively rejected by the Court as having been improperly introduced into the reply. It is 'herefore not correct that the Court did act think it necessary to stach. It must be borne in mind that Captain Saunders has had no opportunity of confuting the statements made by Colonel Hamilton in these letters; but I have been instructed that he is in a position effectually to confute them. This proceeding on the part of Colonel Hamilton's candourand improredly, as avinced throughout these proceedings, and it will be more strongly appreciated when the proceed.

THE ELEVENTH OF JUNE—THE NATIONAL ANTHEM.

To the Editor of the Herald.

Siz.—As I understand the National Anthem is to be sung by the children who will assemble in the Domsin on the 11th instant, I would beg to suggest the adoption of the fellowing additional verse on that occasion:

Our future Sovereign bless,

Nor, on his Consort less

May peace descend;
Blest may their union prove,
Guarded by heaven above,
Rich in a people's love,
Till life shall end.

Yours, &c.,

A TEACHER.

THE NAME OF THE COLONY.

THE NAME OF THE COLONY.

To the Editor of the Herald.

Sir.,—By your permission I beg to add one more to the letters which have appeared on the above subject.

I cannot agree with "Novacambrians" suggestion of "Nova Cambria," for why should we try to perpetuate in Latin that which in English is only remarkable for its absurdity? True, the Latin is more suphonious; but I think that its scancely a sufficient reason.

With reference to the suggestion of "G. H. S." he seems—in his proposed title of "Britannia Nova," or "Britannia, alone"—to have had in his mind the concluding line of W. C. Wentworth's ode,

"A new Britannia in another world."

But I think his heart falls him when proposing this rather presumptunes title, for he prefers, he says, "East Australia," and of course, the people "East Australians. Now, we have already West Anatralians, N. E. by R. Australians, and, with the further hoped-for and petitioned-for subdivisions of the continent, we, by partly of reasoning, must expect to have W. S. W. Australians, N. E. by R. Australians, and so fort; which would seem rather abound. I think it would be best to speak of the whole continent as divided into North, South, East, West, and Contral Australia, and then the various colonies as comprised in one of these divisions. We have already flee, and another, Riverina, in embryo (?).

Agreeing with "Novacambrian," in "doing the classical," and adopting a Latin title as being more suphonious, from which "G. H. S." does not dissent, I submit my proposition. Our country being beyond all others the land of the fleec, I weature to suggest "Velleria," from cellus feelieris, the Latin word for "a fleec," are not unsuphonious. Or, we may combine in one word the two great sources of our wealth—(lane) wool, and (aurum) gold, and call our country in Lanauria, the land of wool and gold. Or, as there seems to be every probability that we are to have a veint for Prince Alfred, in the Recoon, ordered to the Pradic estation, would it not be a graceful compliment paid to cur Queen

THE FORTHCOMING CELEBRATION.

To the Editor of the Herald.

SIR.—There is a very old, but very true maxim, called—
"Prevention is better than cure," and bearing that same in mind induces me to endesvour to call the attention of the Executive, through the medium of your journal, to the great probability of the loss of life and serious accidents arising, if the main streets—vis., Goorge and Pitt streets, are allowed to remain open for cabs, omnibuses, and other vehicles, which would be certain to crowd the streets on such an occasion.

What I would suggest is, that no vehicles, public or private, or persons on horseback, should be allowed to traverse George-street, from the Railway Bridge to Bridge-street; or Pitt-street, from the Watch-house at the junction of George-street, from the Watch-house at the junction of George-street is to Bridge-street, from 8 p.m. of the lithvill 2 a.m. of the 12th, thereby leaving the path and road open to all alike, rich or poor, and enable paramet to take their children to see the illuminations without the faar of their heing knocked down by some runsway horse, frightend by the unusual glare of light, or display of rockets, do., do., do.

In offering these suggestions, Sir, I am actuated by one feeling only.—i.s. the public asfety. I do not doubt I may give offence to some, but is it not better that a few should be disappointed than many perhaps lose their lives, or at least have their limb broken, and be ortpied for life. There can be no doubt that the main streets of Sydney will be crowded in a manner they never were before, and, parhape, never will beagain, and, fancy one or two 'bolte' through the mot. I think that is sufficient to induce the Government to adopt the course I have so feebly pointed out, and, I trust, Sir, that you will lend thes add of your powerful pen in bringing the matter about.

GOLD QUOTATIONS,

To the Editor of the Heads.

Sin,—In answer to "K.", the purity of gold is ascortained by the lowes, the writer has personally seen it (in thins) in practice. A particular kind of stone is used, brought from Germany, and called, from this man, a louestone. This stone is black, with a smooth but not potlahed surface.

A stroke is made upon the stone with the gold of which it is desired to ascertain the quality, alongaids of which another stroke is made with a needle of gold, of which a many are kept, varying from the quality of ins gold, or of 24 carat, downwards. If the colour of both upon the stone be exactly the same, the finescene, or rather the particular quality of the gold, is at once denoted.

Yours, obediently,

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 3, 1863.

WE refer our readers to a letter headed "Man-stealing in the Pacific," and signed by the Rev. A. W. MURRAY, of Newtown. We recom-A. W. MURRAY, of Newtown. We recom-mend it to the most serious perusal of every man in this community who has a spark of humanity in his nature, and who recognises any sort of responsibility in reference to his fellowmen. The first impression will, doubtless, be astonishment—almost, incredulity. It will be asked whether it be possible for human beings to exist so flendish?—whether a Government an exist under whose shadow such crimes can be perpetrated ?—whether mercantile men can be found who will employ their capital in such pursuits ?—whether the whole human race will be capable of furnishing instruments to embark in such borrors in number and organization such as are represented? It is now, doubtless, true—made manifest from different sources that the whole of the islands of the Pacific are exposed to the depredations of a piratical fleet whose path is marked by crime and blood, and that this fleet conveys its victims to a country professing the Christian name—recognised by Christian Governments, and that these captives are sold into slavery, to be worked in mines where they speedily perish. It is asserted that those versels have carried off the whole adult male population of one of the islands-that have seized the straggling fishermen they have found at a distance from the shore—that all the artifices which can be used are employed to entrap these unhappy people. Vessels freighted with hundreds of these natives of the Southern Islands go from shore to shore, enticing, capturing, and enslaving. It is proved that in their treatment they are exposed to the horrors of the middle passage, to perish in hundreds in the vicissitudes of the nefarious trade. It is shown that the most flourishing stations under the Missionary Societies are suffering from their -that they have dared to approach depredations—that they have dared to approach a people whose attainments have placed them within the rank of British civilisation, and are quite equal in their morals and character to the people from whom the light of Christianity went forth to visit them. It is shown that these crimes against them have been perpetrated under circumstances which will render every vessel approaching the shores of any of the islands suspected and dreaded. If there be one feeling of resentment left in the bosom of the unhappy islanders, they will regard the massacre of white men as a sacred duty, unless they are restrained in their vengeance by the influence of their teachers. It is to the honour of the Government of France that its representatives in the Southern Ocean have put forth their power and arrested some of these destroyers of men. In this respect the French nation have often appeared to advantage. Leaping over all the niceties of nternational etiquette or the technicalities of maritime liberty, they have sometimes, to the advantage of public justice, gone direct to the object which must be dear to every civilised ring, and promptly treated criminals as such, whatever might be their flag or their country. We have no wish to imitate the prompt and vigorous movements which have often characterised our neighbours in this respect. The slower and more reserved action of our own nation seems to answer better to the character of Englishmen, but we should be ashamed of our countrymen if it could be supposed that in the depths of their nature there are not sympathies as strong, resolution as firm, vigour as resistless in putting down such criminality as resistess in putting down such criminality as could be found among any foreign people. England is not indeed bound by treaties to these Christian populations that by the influence of the subjects of England, and by the costly efforts of their missionary societies, have been brought to look upon white men as their friends and benefactors. Surely it will be the resolution of tors. Surely it will be the resolution o England's highest statesmen that at any cost, and by all means, this blot, not upon the people who perpetrate such crimes, for they are too infamous to be diagrand. infamous to be disgraced, but upon those who even witness them, shall be washed out. and that these worst of murderers shall be exterminated. Is not Peru amenable to the comity of nations? Can it be possible that European States will suffer crimes like these to

What is to be done? We may be told that the people of this colony have no power—that they have no fleet—no means of resistance and repression: but we can tell them that they have commercial interest in the extinction of this infamous trade. There is not a vessel that leaves this harbour for the South Sea that can co so with safety, because these enemies of mankind will be equally enemies to ourselves. They will be exposed to the passions of the native population, who cannot be expected in all cases to distinguish between one ship and another. But it is not self-interest which must create a desire to move against this could it is to be a support to move against the could be a support to the could be a suppo desire to move against this evil : it is the im pulse of the human heart, when it is the witness f such extravagance, to cry out against it. It is not whether the cry has power or will inspire an arm that can strike, but it is the spontaneous and irrepressible emotion of humanity to project in the face of heaven, if there be no other witness, sgainst atrocious wrong. We hope there will be found in this community men of heart, and men of mind, and determination who, without calculating what strength they possess, will put it all forth to awaken the Government to a sense of its du'y, in order to interpose a shield between these islanders and their destroyers.

We have a frightful lesson of what men are capable, and of the fallacy of those commoncapable, and of the fallacy of those common-places by which African slavery is maintained. It is not necessary to be an African to be a slave. No race is spared by human cupidity. The children of the Pacific are as exposed as those of New Guines. Nor are the children of white men spared whenever they fall into the hands of these manstealers. We hope that this consciousness will awaken the whole people of this colony, and especially those who have interested themselves in behalf of the Polynesians—and that they will not disregard the warning which makes the silent witness the participator of the evil which is done in his presence, even though he may close his eyes.

Science in modern days is not pursued merely for the satisfaction of that legitimate curiosity which teaches us to pry into the secre's of Na-ture. The utilitarian tendency of the age leads to the practical application of the knowledge acquired. Where one mind is devoted to discovering new facts, another is devoted to studying the uses to which those facts can be New substances are introduced to no are shewn to have unexpected value. None of the resources of Nature are neglected; every-thing is being turned to account.

Especially remarkable is the extent to which substances formerly cast aside as refuse are now being worked up again in new forms, thus promoting an economy of manufacture, an absence of waste, and a cheapening of useful products. A simple illustration of this has just been furnished in England was it is one that been furnished in England, yet it is one that has a special value, because it has been suc-cessfully applied to the solution of a social For many years past there have been philanthropists who have devoted themselves, especially in London, to improving the dwellings of the working classes. It has been felt that there was no chance for intellectual and moral elevation where the homes were dark, dirty, and unwholesome. An essential step towards the creation of a higher standard of self respect lay in the material improvement of perivading plenty of light, fresh air, good drainage, and abundance of pure water. These would prove valuable auxiliaries to the labours of the teacher and the preacher, as the absence of them has frequently neutralised those labours.

The first suggestion was, that capitallsts should invest money in building improved accommodation for the working classes, and so enjoy the double reward of a good percentage for their money, and the gratification of doing a benevolent work. But it was found on inves tigation that to buy up hovels and rebuild good cottages on their sites would be anything but a paying speculation. The wretchedest description of house property pays the highest proportionate rent. No landlords get so high a return for their money as those who hold property in the dingiest courts and the filthiest alleys. The natural action of private enterprise being thus foreclosed, a society was formed to take the matter in hand, and it was hoped that by the judicious expenditure of a considerable capital in the right places a fair profit might be made. The society has done good in calling attention to the question, but it has hardly succeeded in securing perfection even in the construction of model dwellings, while it has altogether failed in making the investment return an adequate profit. A capital of eighty thousand pounds has been sunk in buildings, from which the net returns are not above two per cent.

This result is admitted to be a serious failure. The most experienced philanthropists recognise The most experienced philanthropists recognise the expediency of keeping charity within its proper limits, and of not allowing it to trans-gress into the domain of business. The task of providing homes for the people is not properly a work of charity, any more than under ordi-nary circumstances is the task of finding them nary circumstances is the task of nating them in clothes or food. Things will not be on a satisfactory footing till the best article that can be furnished for the money is producible under the ordinary mercantile conditions of supply and demand. Mr. WATERLOW, a City alderman, has patiently studied the question from this point of view. As it was impossible to look for higher rentals, the only way to increase profits was to reduce the outlay, by finding out how to build more cheaply. Assisted by his builder, a Mr. Allen, he has achieved this result by the adoption of a new material. The substratum adoption of a new material. And was cheap of this new compound, which is to make cheap and comfortable homes for the poorer classes, is nothing but that despised material known as nothing but that despised material known as "clinker," the refuse from the gas works, and for which no better use has hitherto been known than to throw it on the streets. But, by mixing it with Portland cement, and moulding it, when semi-fluid, into any needed shapes, a building material is produced which is considerably cheaper than brick or stone. It is reported to be strong, light, durable, and fire-proof. By using this substitute, and at the same time economising in the wood work by the use of machinery wherever possible, it has been found that the accommodation for a family, formerly producible at a cost of one hundred and eighty pounds, is now produced at a cost of only one hundred. The consequence of this great cheapening in buildbe perpetrated? It is in Peru that the fruit of this nefarious traffic is to be reaped. It is ing is that the triumphant result has been there that the unfortunate people are to labour for those who spoil them. It is therefore under good a profit as at once to bring the question of such tenements within the range of cordinary commercial enterprise. Mr. WATER-Low has not been specially forcusate in the purchase of his first experimental freehold; on the contrary, he has been at some disadvantage in this respect. Yet, on the two thousand pounds he has spent, he is getting a net return of nine per cent., the sets of rooms being let at from five to seven shillings a week. He has possessed himself of four similar blocks of lands, on each of which he proposes to erect similar struc-tures, and so popular is the accommodation thus to be provided with the class for whom it is intended, that the whole has already been applied for. The proof of the pudding is in the eating, says an old proverb.

Time will show how far these novel houses will really stand the ordinary wear and tear, or whether any hitherto unsuspected defects will develop themselves. But if the present expectations are realised, it is obvious that a great step has been taken in achieving the results for which philanthropists have been long labouring. In a crowded city like London, where every inc of ground is precious, the system of flats has, of course, been adopted, but every set of rooms is quite separate, the flat roof being the only part

The Opera.—The fine opera of Ernsni was produced at the Prince of Wales Theatre on Monday evening, and repeated yesterday, when Lady Young and Miss Dalton honoured the theatre by their prosense. The highly dramatic character of the incidents, and the peru in which they are supposed to occur, give them an historical as well as a musical interest, and afford shutdant materies to the composer is his adaptation of the music to the plot. Each act is full of interest, but the third is generally the most popular, and is in itself sufficiently full of events to form a complete opera. A con-piracy—the election of an empore—the sentence to death of the compitators—their ultimate pardom—the union of Ernani and Elvira—and the invocation by the spirit of Cnarleange, have been treated by Verdi in a musterly style. The characters are all good, and very much is required of the artistes who personate them. They involve the exercise of great power, and tax the voices to a degree, berhaps, unsurpassed by any other opera. Madame Escott sustained the rile of Elvira with more than her usual success. The opening cavadius. "Sorta e is notte," with the andante "Ernani lave. lami," and the concluding allegro "Tatto e spresso," were admirably rendered by her. The celebrated trio in the first act, between Gomez, Ernani, and Evira, was also sung with much power. Mr. Waston ab. some is note, with the analone "grant involumi," and the concluding allegro "Tutto e sprezzo," were admirably rendered by her. The celebrated trio in the first act, between Gomes, Ernani, and Evira, was also sung with much power. Mr. Wharton appears to advantage as Don Carlos, and, though in the first act his singing was too contabile, as the opera proceeded he evinced more spirit, and assumed the declamatory style in which the music is written for his part. The ceratina" Oh do verd' anni mie!" may be particularly noticed as a fine effort. The part of Ernani is a severe test for the tenor, but Mr. Squires did justice to the author; his opening solo, "Comercial did justice to the suthor; his opening solo, "Comercial did justice to the suthor; his opening solo, "Comercial did justice to the suthor; his opening solo, "Comercial did justice to the suthor; his opening solo, "Comercial did justice to the suthor; his opening solo, "Comercial did justice to the suthor; his opening solo, "Comercial did justice to the suthor; his opening solo, "Comercial did justice to the suthor; his opening solo, "Comercial did justice." In the suthor of the confederation of the audience. The opera depends very much upon the concerted music, and the chorus is sufficient for the purpose. The choruses were all good—the finale to the first act, and the magniticent chorus which concludes the third sol, brought out the pwer of the choristers; the latter was, of course, excerned on both evenings. To Mr. Rieff, the conductor, much credit is due for the excellent way in which he keeps his musical force together; indeed, the orchestra is so well managed by this gentleman, the accompaniments are so curefully modulated, that the value fa not overpowered, or the excellent way in which he keeps his musical force together; indeed, the orchestra is so well managed by this gentleman, the accompaniments are so curefully modulated, that the value fa not overpowered, or the excellent way in which he keeps his musicam. Sample or Cotton.—The Nescastle Telegraph says:—A rather fine sample of cotton, the praduce of a small quantity of New Orleans seed, cultivated by Mr. Thomas Hyde, of Mosquito Island, was brought to our office on Thursday morning. The pod is not a picked one, but a fair average of the crop, and although the fabric is not so long as some we have seen growing on the Hunter, it is a very fair sample, and quite sufficient to show the capabilities of the soil and climate hereabout for the successful cultivation of this valuable product.

The Solitude of London.—London, because of its very vastness, is a noble city for one who, like myself, has the habit of solitary walking at unseasonable hours with no other end than that of parly escaping, party indulging reveries that Fate and Chance have made among the saddest. Oht the dark, dreary, and yet soul-exercising and soul southing walks that its nocturnal vastness has afforded me! Many a night through its flaring ceatre have my feet carried me, round and again through labyrinths of alleys, to the same more open and bustling spots—little atteative, and yet not altogether inatentive, to the crowded shows of vice, merriment, and misery there to be met with; and many a night, unable to bear the thought of yet returning to my rooms, have I suddenly turned away from these too noisy and luminous haunts, and, prolonging my walk unconsciously through some main line of street leading to the quiet outshirts, found myself at lest, ofter many turnings, in regions of villas and raised trraces, so decolate that the one watchmus whom I met on his rounds looked after me as I passed him; or in still more desolate regions where the ground was dup up for the foundations of new buildings, and I had to beware of planks and dim heaps of rubbish in the yet rudimentary streets. Sometimes, in these walks, I have found myself beyond the built limits altogether, out in the open roads, between fields and trees, where, if any watchman was met, it was a mounted one; and I am not sure but, of all my nocturnal rambles, those occasional penetrations of the absolute outer blackness linger most powerfully in my memory. From them I think it is that I have picked up a strange superstition about trees. Whether it is because, as the walks in a road at night bordered by fields, the nearer trees and hedges sitp at one is the glimanting light, and so produce an appearance of stealthy stirring among the more distant stems and bushes, certain it is that these perm Twellfth-day is of considerable antiquity, for mention is made of it in a charter of Robert, Bishop of Amiena, dated in 1811. In the seventeenth century the custom was observed even at royal tables, for Mdme. de Motteville relates that, in 1648, she and two other ladies shared a twelfth-cake with the King and Queen, and drank their Majesties health in hippoeras. In some families it was the custom to cut partons for the infent Jesus and the Virgin, which were always distributed to the poor. In the following year Mdme. de Motteville again passed Twelfth-night with the royal family; and the bean happening to be in the part assigned to the Virgin, it was agreed that the Queen should have the honours of the evening sad hippocras was again the boverage used. Louis XIV always kept Twelith-day, of course with the formal dignity he invariably observed in public. It is said that when Louis XV, and his three sons shared the twelfth-cake, the bean was cut into three pieces, which was regarded as a sign that not one of the three brothers would ascend the throne. The King considered this ic cident as of bad augury.

The Burial-Place of Lord Byzon.—A com-munion plate cheet has just been presented by his Grace the Duke of Pottland to the church of Hack-nall Torkard, near Nottingbam (the burial-place of the noble lord), for bolding the silver-gilt service given to that church in 1664 by the Hon, Elizabeth Byron, daughter of Viscount Chaworth, an ancestor of the great poet. The chest is of oak, very rich is tint, taken from an ancient building near Welbeck Abbey, the seat of his Grace the Duke of Portland, and is an admirable specimen of lagenious cabinet-work.

BUSINESS FOR TO DAY.—We have been requested to announce that Mr. Justice Wise will to day, in the first instance, go through all the ejectment cases on the paper, and will dispose of any such of them as may be unde-fended. After this any case on the paper may be taken, as found convenient.

My dear Brother,—You will doubtless be surprised to hear of my arrival at Sydney; but I have certainly come on board the Monduras. I about have apprised you of this yesterday avening, but had no opportantly of doing so. Mr. Hamsay, however, was to call its order to convey this intelligence, and it appears that a note just received from him, inclosing one he received from you, shows that he did so that you as my brother should be amorped with Mr. Hamsay, I could not doubt; but would it not have been better for you to have seen me before writing such a mote! Surely you have not eradicated all affection from your heart towards those who have been everything to you! But I can say no more than to request you will come on board and speak to me, for be assured I as one who will never solicit your support.

The estate contains by grant 90 acres, which, with the exception of a few acres, have been cleared and sumped, and a considerable portien planted with 2800 fruit troos, about one-third of which are in full bearing, the residue being younger plants, of which a number are commoning to bear fruit. They consist priscipally of orange, apple, and plum trees, which have been selected with great care, The land has been well trenched and manured, and no means neglected or expense spared in keeping it in firstrate order, so that the purchaser would enter into an estate which would require but little sammal outlay, and return a large and rapidly-increasing income.

Eastwood House is a comfortable well-finished brickbuilt family residence, and, with all the numerous outoffices, is a good order.

The 2000 acre grant was an early selection by the lake Sir John Jamison. The road from Boweniels to Mudgee passes through it, and it is well wastered by Dalhamiy Creek. A large portion is fine agricultural land, which is eagerly sought for by many who combine farming with quarts crushing and gold seeking pursuits, Cullen Bullers being the centre of a district rioh in gold-bearing reefs, which attract a large population to the locality, amongst whom a good market is always found for produce.

The smaller grants are late selections by Captain Rusself, who, with greet judgment, purchased them at a high figure for the purpose of securing the choicest portions of land in the immediate locality, with the advantage of extensive pre-emptive graning rights.

Bycolal attention is directed to this sale, which will be positive, by order of the mortgage.

MESSHS. W. DEAN and CO. have been favoured with instructions to sell by auction, at their Warehouse, Pitt and O'Connell streets, on THIS DAY, 3rd June, at 12 o'clock, The rapidity with which the whole of the allotments already leased have been built upon, clearly shows the great value of property in this locality, and also that the system of 99 years leases, and the great advantages arising therefrom, are being better understood and acted upon. The tenure is almost equal to a freehold, while it enables the purchaser, at a small annual rest, to secure the land, and expend his capital upon improvements, which will at ones yield him A PROFITABLE RETURN FOR HIS MONEY.

Men of limited capital, or small means, would do well to consider the very great inducements which a lease for so long a period presents to them in particular. With nearly all the advantages of a freehold, they are enabled to acquire A REALLY VALUABLE PROPERTY, by payment of a triffing yearly rental. The fine barque

The Juverna is too well known in this port to need any lengthy remarks, she has invariably landed her cargoes in excellent condition, and the present owner's cole reason for parting with her is that he no longer requires her for the trade in which she has been engaged.

The chair was taken by the Hon, Francis Lewis Shaw Merewether, the Chanceller of the University, on the right hand of whom sat his Excellency Sr Jahn Young K.C.B., Q.C.M.G., the Visitor. To the left of the Chanceller sat the Hon, Charles Cowper. The vice chair was occupied by the Hon, E. Deas Thom. S. Johnson, M.A., acted as croupier. The Senate, the Professors, and the other officers of the University appeared to be all present. Amongst them, in addition to those already mentioned, were the Rev. Dr. Woolley (the Practical), the Ward, and Fellows of St. Paul's College, the Retor and Fellows of St. Paul's College, the Hon. Sir Alf-ed Stephen, C.J., C.B., supporting the Chancellor on his left; the Hon, J. F. Harrawe (the Attoiney-General), Mr. James Martin, Q.C., the Hon. A ter din er-grace having been said by the Rev. Canon Allwood—

The Charcellon rose and explained that the originators of the annual dinner that day inaugatated had desired to give it, as far as possible, a social and friendly character, the object being to gether in good follow-hip the several sections and members of the academic body, and to unite them by that eppril de corps which, said the speaker, is the strength and the life of insuturions such as ours. They had proposed, therefore, that the diams should not be a speechifying one—not only because it would so became an undes rable formality, but also because, in a mixed body, such as ours, unguarded or misund-rateed expressions on the part of speakers in ght give offence, and so endanger the principal object in view. It was, therefore, intended that there should be but three toasts, and those such as might safely be left to the spontaneous action of their own feelings. He would without further remark, proceed to give the first of these toasts—the first in order, in honour, and in their regard—"The Queen."

The toast was received with all the honours, the

The toast was received with all the honours, the bend playing "God Save the Queen."
The next toast proposed by the Chancellor was Prosperity to the Sydney University—"Flored Academia Sciencessis."
Drunk amudst hearty cheering, the band playing the air—"When I view those scenes so charming."
The Vier-Chancelou—Mr. Deas Thomson—teen rose, and said that he had much gratification in proposing to them the health of their distinguish d guest, his Excellency Sir John Young, the Governor of the colony. They considered it a great privilege to have, and Excellency Sir John Young, the Givernor of the colory. They considered it a great privilege to have, as the Visitor of the University, a gentleman of such distinguished shinty and high literary attainments; one who was a graduate of one of the greatest universities that the world possessed, and in which he took high hondars. They trusted that he might long continue to hold an office which he had filled with so much digardy and ability. In the simule form which much digasity and ability. In the simple form which was enjoined by their academic usages, the teat that he proposed was "The Visitor,"—and with all the honours which were so justly due to his Excellency the present incumbent.

Druck amidst loud cheering, the band playing a Drank amidst loud cheering, the band playing a lively and appropriate air.

His ExertLency said that he rejoiced that his official position as "Visitor" entitled him to be present on that occasion, and to take his part in the inauguration of what he trusted would prove to be a long series of annual diances—a series as long as those kept up at Oxford and Cambridge from time immemorial, or those at the linus of Court, where, as it was reported, the same bill of fare had actually been served up, year by year, for centuries. Nor were such annual dianars confined in the mother country to the halls of Oxford and Cambridge, and to the linus of Court. Similar annual feasts were, it would be remembered, of commen observance amongst those great London commen observance amongst those great London com-panies, the exact orgin of which was now lost in renote antiquity, but which were still celebrated for their executent well-ordered schools and extensive charities. At these guild dinners, relice, annually exhibited. At these guild dinners, relice, annually exhibited, showed how very long such period cal festivities must have been in uninterrupted observance,—relica which had obviously been in use since the days of Richard II., and which hore testimony to the long and prosperous existence of the society to which they still belonged. So might their University continue; so might centuries of uninterrupted pro-perity r ll over them as an institution, and entitle them to every credit. them to every credit crowning their useful service with the reverence due to honoured sge! The occasion, however, on which they were assembled was one devoted to sociality rather than to speechmaking, one devoted to sociality rather than to speechmaking, and he should therefore proceed at once to give the toast which he had obtained permission from the shair to give before he rose. That toast which he had to propose was the health of the Honoradie F. L. S. Mereweiher, their honoured Chancellor. He believed that such a toast required no lengthened excribium from him to recommend it in a company where Mr. Mereweiher was so very well known. He felt that he need not dwell on the long and useful career of that gentleman in the colony, on the services he had rendered, both in office and in the Legislative Council, on his finished and practical sloquence, and on the qualities and accompishments which had endered him to a large circle of friends. Should he attempt to dwell upon these, he felt sure that the whole company would be ready to rise at once and to say, "This is all well known to us; it has been marked by us for years, and is recorded by us in our amorties and in our affections." He gave them, as a toast, "The Chanceller's good health, with a happy voyage home, and a safe and speedy return to these shores."

This toast was drunk amid rounds of enthusiastic sheering, the band playing "Should anid acquaintance be forgot?" and "Home, sweet Horae."

The Chancenton said a nice point might, perhaps, be raised as to whether the Governor of the teast was at liberry to call to order the Governor of the colony—who was also their Visitor—for breaking the rules of the feast. He would, however, at once admit that he was so gratified at the high hanour paid to him that he had not been at all disposed to call his Excellency to order. There was a story told of Coleridge's wonderful powers of conversational cloquence, to the effect he had kept up a continued discourse on an abstrase subject to Sir George Beaumont from the afternoon until past midnight; and, really, if he were to strempt to express all his mingled feelings on this occasion, at the kindness and the honour which he had received in connection with the associations of that place, he should be in a fair way to go on and on, like Coleridge, until (not possessing Coleridge's powers of fascination) he might be left there alone in his glary. He would, therefore, ask them to accept his simple assurance that he had felt, as a man ought to feel, the high honour conferred upon him. He had long been anxious for the establishment of this dimear, and it was a great gratification to him to be present at the first which had been held. It was a still greater gratification to him to preside at that dinner with the distinguished scholar and gentlemun, who held the high office of their Visitar, with the higher office of Governor, by his side. From the two next dinners he should the absent; but should they be held in future (as he thought they ought to be) on a fixed day in connection with the commemoration, if they were held on any fixed day which he could know beforehead on any fixed day which he could know beforehead on any fixed day which he could know beforehead of the

This was the end of the speeches and the toests but the company did not separate for some time afterwards.

THE BULLI COAL MINE.

YESTERDAY morning, about one hundred and fifty gautlemen, many of them councied with leading mercartile firms in this city, who had been invited by the directors of the Hulli Coal Mining Company to speed the day in a viet to the invite, embasked on board the Hunter steumer, at the Phonix Wharl, in order to proceed to Bulli, which is situated in a hight of the coast, immediately to the north Bellatubi, and not more than eight or ten miles from K. sma.

of Pediambi, and net more than eight or ten miles from K sma.

The passage was made in four hours, including the delay of healthy up to the magnificent jetty or pier that has been constructed by the company. It runs sut a distance of about 150 yards from the shore, stands twenty feet above the level of the water, and has fifteen field depth of water at lowest tides under and near the shoots. At present there are two shoots, one on each side the pier, with a line of transway diverging up to each. The transway leads down direct from the mine, and being on an fusine the whole way, the leaded tracks are sent from by their own impens to the very end of the jetty. It shi track is fitted with a break, working so admirably that the leaded whicks can be stopped instantaneously even when at the

As yet no side cuttings have been made in either adii.

Having seen all that was to be seen at the mines, for the men were making baliday, and were consequently not at work, the party teturned to the neighbourhood of the pier, tally prepared to do justice to the collation that had, during their ramble, been prepared for them, in a large tent erceted for the purpose, and thewere the cabbege tree paim. It should have been mentioned that all the men employed on the establishment, together with a large number of the settlers from the surrounding districts and of the residents of Wollongong, were assembled on the epot to welcome the guests on their landing, and in do honour to the occasion. There could not have been for extent there bundred persons present, and many of those were of the fairer sex, whose particular det them to surmaunt all inconviniences, and grace the interesting ceremony with their presence.

In the main tent about two hundred gentlemen ast down to dinner. Mr. G. W. Allen occupied the chair, having, Mr. Arnold, Minister of Works, and District Court Juleo Owen on his right, and the Very Rev. Dean O'Cannel on his left. Mr. Waring, Mayor of Wollongong, officiated as vice-chairman, Meserz T. The Chairman said, the next teast was one that he knew would be received with enthusiasm equal to the last, especially at a time when they were making preparations to comme merate the amplicious marriage of the parties referred to. He proposed "The Prince and Princess of Wales."

The teast was drunk with lond cheers. Air, Band. The Chairman said, it devolved upon him to now propose to them the health of one whom most of them knew, for he had but recently visited the district, and made them all nequainted with his urbanity and gentlemanly behaviour. He could say much on this subject, but he was preduced from making a speech by the short time they had before them; he would, therefore, content himself with proposing. His Exocliency the Governor."

The teast were drunk with cheers. Air—"Fine old English gentleman." Band.

The VICE-CHAIRMAN proposed "The Ministry,"—the loss theirs drunk with cheers, and the band playing the Night Bell Galop.

Mr. ABNOLD, in responding, said he was not aware, when he accepted the invitation to this remain, that this honour would be done to any Ministry of which he formed part; and he might say that he took it as an especial compliment that he toast should be drunk at such a place and at such a meeting, because, as it happened, this locality was not under the slightest obligation either to the present or to any former Ministry. He would observe that there was a time when it was the fashion to give the sidvocacy of any particular case or principle to those who were best able to forward it, by the power they possessed of addressing meetings; but now times were changed, and there was such an overwhelming amount of pablic speaking that to him it seemed more like an abuse of public pestion than anything clee. Amongst the ladies the prevaining nuisance of the present day was crimtine. (Hear, and laughter) He looked upon it that the inflated style of drew shade they were just as much able to judge on the outside show of crindi

The Vice-Charkman gave "The Army, the Navy, and the Volunteers," which was drunk with the usual honours, and was responded to by Captain Sullivan, as a member of the Naval Bitgade.

Mr. G. Thounton, in proposing the next toast, said that they were indebted to the Bulli Company for a very pleasant trip; and, though it had been made by sea, and had, consequently, been accompanied by seme drawbacks on the part of those not used to the rolling element, yet the company had the oredit of instituting a novel and agreeable picnic, and, consequently, it would be unjust, as well as ungenerous, of the victors, if they did not recognise this kindness in a proper way. The Chairman had set them an excellent example of short speeches, and that example he should follow, by giving them. "Success to the Bulli Coal Mining Company." and with this he begged to couple. "Success to the Mineral and Agricultural Interest of the district." The beautiful and varied productions of nature that they had that day witnessed in the bush, and the gorgeous natural ornaments that adorned this tent showed how prollife the district was both in its mineral and agricultural productions, and he asked them to join him in the hops that these might be made available to the community. One of the expression of the hon. Minister for Works he decidedly agreed with, that those who helped themselves deserves thelp from others. Now, when he looked at the spiendid breakwater or pier that the company had erected, at the transway they had laid down, at the engineering improvements they had adopted, at the mine they had opened, he could not but consulue that the company had well helped themselves. And they had done wisely, for all these things were required, all this large expenditure was absolutely necessitated before they could expect vessels to come here to load. They must have advantages held out to them in order to bring them to a new place, Now, the hon. Ministerpour to the fact of the district were fally slive to the importance of this event; but more partio pentirmen present to assist. As however, they had drunk the toast of "Success to the Bolli Company," they would no doubt assist in carrying it out, and in that belief to thanked them for it.

Mr. T. Halm rose to respond to the mining interests of the district. It afforded him much pleasure to be present at this festive beard. He had joined heartly in meeting them icedsy, as a neighbour, and as one engaged in the same occupation as this company. He could assure them that he looked with some degree of pride at this meeting, because, without cardison, he might say that he had been the first in this end of the district, and that he had been the pioneer of the Bulli Company. In all stincerity he wished the company that he hadeen the pioneer of the Bulli Company. In all stincerity he wished the company that the material they were sending to market was quite equal to that which he had been sending now for many years, and which was well known. In fact they were on the same seem of one as himself, being only a mile and a half away from oach other. He was sure that before long their article would be appreciated, and that the company would resp the reward

The Press' was then given by the Chairman, and ably responded to; and after the health of the Chair. "The Press" was then given by the Chairman, and suitably responded to; and after the health of the Uniform had been proposed by Mr. Annolm, and drunk with musical honours (led off by Mr. Farquharson) by the company present, the Chairman had leen led to the company present, the Chairman had led to drunk the health of the workmen of the company.

This was done with much spirif, and with three times three, and then the company proceeded on locard the Hunter, and, after a rapid and a pleasant passage over the monthly waters, landed in Sydney by ten o'clook.

Thicks with the Telegraph.—On the occasion of his recent raid north of the Kappahannock, General Stuart played soms queer pranks with the telegraph. Among other things he sent a telegram to Quartermaster-General Meigs, at Washington, requesting him to furnish the Confederate army with better muler, as those provided of late had been of very poor quality. Out in Kentucky Morgan played a somewhat similar trick. Reaching Munford-ville on Friday of last week, his operator, a man named Aud, who lately left the Louisville office, immediately attached his instrument and sent a densited
